What is Tekone Sushi?

The authentic local cuisine of Shima originated in Miketsukuni.

Miketsu-kuni is the area from which local seafood such as abalone and natural salt was offered to the Imperial court of Japan in ancient times. Shima refers to the area which forms the southern part of Mie prefecture.

The origin of the cuisine is said to go back to the days when local fishermen at sea on their fishing boats prepared fish for themselves, and mixed it with steamed rice. Tekonezushi' has now become a major local dish with which to entertain visitors.

There is an enormous variety of tastes and flavors to be found in the food available at local restaurants. We do hope that you will take the time to discover the culinary delights that they have to offer.

Shima-city has long been known as the `ryoshi-no-machi,' a village of fishermen.

In the old days, the men went to sea and spent long hectic days working with the nets and fishing; and, even today, there are many such men living in this city. As we can imagine they eat their meals at sea, and it is said that the unique 'tekone-zushi' was created by them to facilitate eating while on the water.

This story was told to us by a local fisherman:
"We're incredibly busy, even between jobs. And, it's always so troublesome to eat sashimi piece by piece, dipping each mouthful in soy sauce before we eat it. What could we do? Well, we thought about soaking the fish in the soy sauce first. But then, we also thought about mixing it with the rice. Wait a minute! It shouldn't just be rice, but rather vinegared rice. That would be much better. It would keep longer. Then, we could make instant sushi!" So, that's how `tekone-zushi' was invented.

It was a type of sushi, in which fish, rice and soy sauce is mixed by hands. People soon began to refer to this kind of sushi as `tekone.' With such a story behind it, Shimano-tekone-zushi has become a local favorite and is always served at special occasions, such as memorable family events or when entertaining guests.

The recipes for tekone-zushi and its ingredients vary region by region. With such a variety available, it is part of our enjoyment of life to savor each local recipe.
